Mom-son win New Year's mixed doubles

KELSO, Wash. — The mother-son team of Tina and Mike Olson of Kelso grabbed first place over the weekend during the annual New Year's Mixed Doubles Tournament at Tim's Timber Tavern.

Area players Dean Mako and Sue Grothen finished second while the patriarch of the Olson clan, Ray, teamed with Drug Ensworth to take third spot.

Tahuya's Mike Waters and Tacoma's Judy George slipped into fourth place to break up the run of locals dominating the top money.

Shelton's Jeff Kersting and Bill Pack, Kelso, shared fifth with Al and Laura Pease.

Twelve teams took part in the two-day tournament.

What will 2005 hold?

I wonder how times I'll have to cross out the date on checks until I remember that we're in a new year and that 2004 has come and gone?

Most columnists like to peer into the crystal ball at the start of a new year, in hopes of being able to give people some insight into what the next 12 months might hold and now it's my turn.

I see continued growth in table shuffleboard in 2005. That assertion is based on increased league and tournament play in many parts of the tournament. Part of that can be attributed the growing number of shuffleboard websites. There's more information about the game and that's bound to bring out someone who finds it interesting.

The biggest growth area in table shuffleboard might be in the area of home play. People who don't frequent bars are buying boards — some of them shorter than standard length — for their homes so they can share the game with family and friends. A few of those people are potentially league and tour-namment players.

There is a certain amount of anti-smoke sentiment around the country and smoking has been banned in some public places. That might encourage some "home players" to try a league or tournament. Of course the other side of that coin is that some current players might not show up if they can't smoke at their favorite establishment. Bar owners, obviously, are fighting to keep smoking rights for their patrons and this battle might last for years.

By way of disclosure, I am a former smoker who prefers a smoke-free atmosphere but who plays in many places where smoking is allowed.

I think the growth this year of the Shuffleboard Federation's North American Championship was a little above what director John McDermott anticipated and that bodes well for the future of that multi-event extravaganza at the Sands/Regency in Reno.

Promotion is the key to shuffleboard's continued growth.

We have to let people know the game is still around and what a satisfying challenge it brings.

Look at pool, bowling and now poker to see the effect of aggressive promotion.

Poker — long seen as a dingy backroom game — has attracted millions of new players over the past several years. Promotion is the reason why. The game's "minds" have figured out a way to make it interesting for the average person in the street and they've dressed up the game to the point where it works for television. And this style of poker is far slower paced than a game of shuffleboard. Sponsors can't wait to add millions of advertising dollars to the pot and players are benefitting. On Saturday, I watched the end of a tournament from a cruise ship where the winner pocketed $1 million.

Bowling promoters have jazzed the image with lights and music and attitude. There is no defense in bowling, but the game keeps gaining popularity.

Pool. The numbers on the checks are proof that putting that game in a controlled setting with willing sponsors paid off.

But we have to get together if we're going to make a dent in the entertainment advertising money that's waiting for us. After hearing/reading 100s of ideas for improving shuffleboard, a recent column calling for a national shuffleboard congress (meeting) in 2005 drew exactly one comment. Disappointing, because there are great minds in shuffleboard but they have to be willing to share their ideas and then watch them be molded in concrete solutions for our game.

Electrical woes

Dee Hudson, owner of the Red Dog and Blue Goose in Port Orchard, Wa., is looking for anyone who might have schematic drawings or other information about the scoreboard wiring system of an American board. Seems the wiring harness shorted out and all of the wires melted together.

If you can lend her a hand send an email to: ldhuds@juno.com.
